Magento is a fast, free and open source ecommerce software solution.Q: Explode array of arrays I've got an array of arrays, where the inner arrays are arrays of objects which are really just straight up 'name-value pairs' of key/value pairs. I can't change that, which is why I'm trying to make the script handle this data. My goal is to take the list of names and make a separate array of values of said name. The part I've been struggling with is the construction of the name to value array. My thoughts are to iterate over the name array, and then when I encounter the inner array which is the value array, add the inner array to the name array. My problem is that when I try to add the inner array to my name array it appears to be an error because it's expecting an array of objects of the same shape, and when I try to convert the name array to an array of objects, it's just a string. The format of the data is: [['one', 'two', 'three'], ['four', 'five', 'six']] [['a', 'b', 'c'], ['d', 'e', 'f']] Here is what I've got so far var names = d3.select("body").selectAll(".
